About NBC

Natural Born Champions (NBC) is a non-profit 501(c)(3) community intervention program that aims to provide educational and professional enrichment services to the inner-city youth, educators, and communities here in Baltimore, MD. NBC serves as a marketplace for educational resources and has implemented various programs, to help remove barriers, that pushes students from pathways full of college and career opportunities and onto the school-to-prison-pipeline. The organization's programs include: before & after care, summer programming, little champions care, recreational sports & sponsorships, mentorships, transportation services, tutoring, and parent & teacher workshops. NBC is uniquely designed to bridge the learning gap by providing resources to enhance the college & career readiness of youth in Baltimore City.

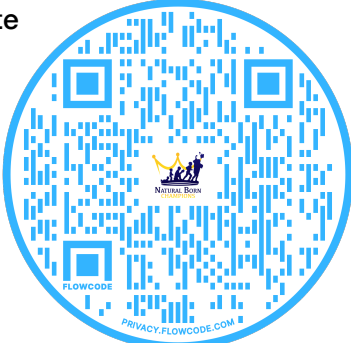

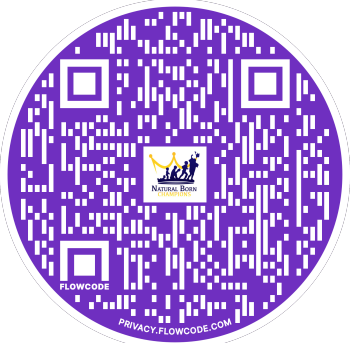

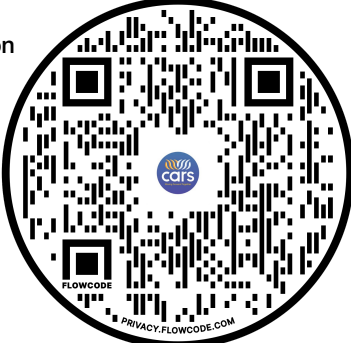

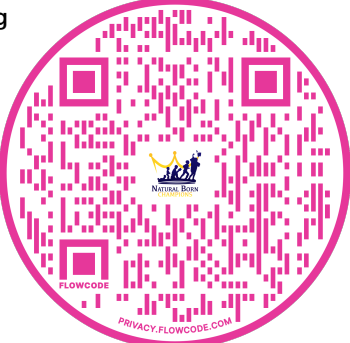

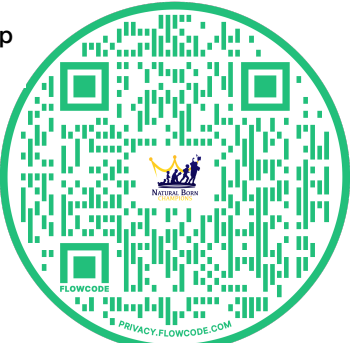

In 2019, the homicide rate was the 2nd highest reported since 1993. Students who fail in the school system, often fall into the justice system, creating a school-to-prison pipeline. To combat the school-to-prison-pipeline, some Baltimore City Public Schools have adopted “Community Schools,” a program that allows students to be productive during their breaks out-of-school or after school time. Initially this strategy was effective by remedying underlying barriers of interventions between teacher-to-student, student-to-school, and school-to-community relationships but many locations have failed to stay consistent and build appropriate trust for such relationships to prosper.

NBC explores and extends the opportunities “Community Schools” attempted to provide students. NBC provides workshops for both teachers and parents. NBC assesses schools demographics and then tailors BCPSS curriculum and strategies to support those students. Moreover, NBC offers opportunities that will affect the lifetime of BCPSS students. Within NBC curriculum, students are strategically trained to becoming entrepreneurs and leaders in their communities. Students must demonstrate accountability, responsibility, and integrity in order to find their purpose. Once students have an idea of who they are, they are better equipped to make others around them better and to improve their community. NBC has hosted multiple summer programs allowing underprivileged students to build their own businesses. Over the past 7 summers, NBC’s campers have opened 3 student-owned and operated businesses. These businesses sell products and services, such as baked goods, clothing accessories, website designing & coding, home decor and more. NBC has also built positive relationships with the community to support each entrepreneur and to help their businesses grow. The most valuable achievement of the NBC program is to provide accelerated support through academic intervention.
